Homeownership: Project Manager Differentiator Pilot

▼ Purpose of this doc

1. Align on what we mean by the “Project Manager Differentiator” and why we believe it matters strategically
2. Define the scope of the first pilot and which existing capabilities we can credibly test today
3. Clarify the key hypotheses, assumptions and proposition questions we need to validate
4. Outline how we plan to test the proposition, measure success and use the learnings to inform future Homeownership strategy and investment decisions

▼ Vision → Strategy → Pilot goals

▼ Vision

We believe Monzo can become the trusted “Project Manager” for first-time buyers - reducing the mental load of the home-buying process by bringing brokerage, conveyancing, surveying and coordination into one connected experience.

🏡 FY27 H1: Homeownership Customer Strategy (2-Year Plan)

▼ Strategy

The broader Homeownership strategy focuses on:

- Improving remortgage conversion through deeper ‘all in Monzo’ integration
- Building a differentiated first-time buyer proposition over time

Our approach to the Project Manager differentiator for first-time buyers is intentionally staged.

Because many of the foundational ingredients already exist within the current Habito Plus proposition - including dedicated customer support, conveyancing coordination, survey relationships and progress visibility - we believe we can start validating key hypotheses in-market before investing heavily in new concept development.

This means the sequencing is:

1. Initial live pilot
    - Use existing Habito capabilities to test real customer behaviour and proposition resonance in-market
    - Validate whether the “Project Manager” territory itself creates meaningful pull for FTBs
    - Test different messaging and positioning approaches using live surfaces
2. Proposition refinement
    - Use early behavioural and qualitative learnings to refine the proposition
    - Explore where PM works best within the funnel:
        - as a top-of-funnel acquisition proposition
        - as a freemium differentiator
        - or as a deeper conversion / monetisation lever within the journey
3. Concept testing and exploratory research
    - Validate which elements of ‘Project Manager’ are most compelling:
        - Customer success expert
        - Tracking and process visibility
        - ID checks done once
    - Explore where we could take the proposition further through:
        - new digital features
        - AI assistance
        - orchestration tooling
        - operational innovation

    - broader lifecycle opportunities

4. Strategic recommendations
    - Use pilot + research learnings to inform:
        - long-term value proposition
        - positioning strategy
        - messaging framework
        - roadmap prioritisation
        - future investment decisions

    The goal of the pilot is therefore not to validate a fully formed end-state vision, but to establish whether the core strategic territory is strong enough to justify deeper investment and expansion.

We will run some workshops to discover what goes into the Pilot

- Workshop 1: Plus Performance & Features – Aligning the technical capabilities and speed of the Plus offering with clear, user-facing value and feature mapping.
- Workshop 2: Project Manager Articulation – Elevating the Project Manager's narrative from basic task management to a high-impact, outcome-driven value proposition.
- Workshop 3: Broker & Paid Synergy – Mapping the overlap between Broker and Paid channels to build a unified hypothesis on how they can mutually drive growth.
- Workshop 4: Design, Messaging & Experimentation – Translating strategy into a concrete visual and copy framework, backed by a structured testing and launch plan.

How we target FTBs

Does targeting lead to better conversion and less spam?

1. No targeting (e.g. non-targeted overview goes to 10% users without a mortgage)
2. Lightweight (e.g. age and credit score)
